

GRATEFUL DEAD--INFRARED ROSES REVISITED

"Grateful Dead--Infrared Roses Revisited" is an entirely computer animated music video created by XAOS, a San Francisco based computer animation company. Comprised of a compilation of music from the "Infrared Roses" album (which is taken from live moments during Grateful Dead concerts), the three-and-a-half minute animated piece takes the viewer on a surreal underworld journey far beyond the typical music video experience.

This video was an excellent opportunity for Xaos to utilize proprietary software and express their creativity in a way that had only been done experimentally before. During the three months of production, Xaos animators stretched the limitations of this software, melding 2D and 3D techniques to create amazing imagery which allows the viewer to become immersed in the scene.

Credits:

Anubis Films--Director: Justin Kreutzmann; Producer: Gillian Grisman; Sound Designer: Bob Bralove.

Xaos--Art Director: Mark Malmberg; Animators: Tony Lupidi, Roberta Brandao, John Chadwick, Henry Preston, Hayden Landis, Ken Pearce, Eric Texier; Graphic Artist: Ric Tringali; Producer Helene Plotkin.